Mario Rugen, 17 months old, of Glen View, had bruises on various parts of her head and body, and Mrs. Mary Mullenix, who claims to be a teacher in the school, told Miss Himmelreich that Mrs. Phillips beat the child whenever it cried, the Humane officer charges.

The place, although it is said to have obtained the sanction of the American School association in Chicago, is not an accredited school, declared T. Arthur Simpson, county superintendent of schools.

Judge Persons ordered the school closed and sent the nineteen children either to the care of their parents or some reputable school or institution.

Lake Villa Entries Receive High Honors at Stock Show

Sensation Improver, Grand Champion Duroc-Jersey Boar, Owned by O. W. Lehmann, Chesney Farms Lake Villa.

Chesney Farms of Lake Villa, Ill., a great opportunity for farmers breeding Durocs to have such a wonderful boar in the county, and with this as a background it should be a great incentive for the farmers of this section to take up the breeding of Durocs as a side line.

It is the idea of Chesney Farms to offer their stock to the farmers and breeders in the form of auction sales which will be held at their farms east of Lake Villa. The first sale will be held Feb. 10th, when 60 head of bred sows and gilts bred to Sensation Improver, the International Champion, will be sold.

Mr. W. M. Marks, manager of Chesney Farms, informs us that those who did not have the opportunity to see this great boar at the International will be welcome to come to Chesney Farms any time and see this giant Duroc and the herd.

The stables of O. W. Lehmann and J. K. Dering were very successful at the International Stock Show. Mr. Lehmann's stables winning twenty-six ribbons with his fine harness, saddle horses and jumpers. The Cedar Crest Farms, J. K. Dering's stable, winning twenty-five ribbons with their Hackney Ponies. These two stables were the highest winners of any stables at the show, and continue to keep the name of Lake Villa on the map. With the completion of this show these stables are two of the largest winners on show horses in the United States. They have traveled over 7000 miles and won over 700 prizes in 1922.

Those interested in the welfare of the Cooperative Marketing Co. are no doubt interested in the announcement of the victory of the company in the service charge case brought up in Wisconsin, enabling the Marketing Co. to levy the service charge in that state.

The victory was won in face of desperate opposition on the part of Wisconsin condensers with reported assistance of outside dealers.

Reports from the Marketing Company are of a very encouraging nature and with the steady increase in the demand of the products of the central plant it has necessitated the call for more milk, and the increase of their fine large truck service to sixteen he speaks the progress made by this farmers company.

The sight of the beautiful white trucks with the name "Milk Producers Cooperative Marketing Co." standing out in bold letters, scurrying around Chicago's busy streets should be a wonderful incentive for the non-members to get on the band wagon with the growing company.

The harmful propaganda that has been spread about the country to the effect that the Marketing Company is keeping down the price of milk in their sale of it at nine cents has been very ably repudiated in an article appearing in the last issue of the "Milk Reporter," as follows:

A lot of sound and fury has been expended by those who spend their time and energy in an attempt to injure the Marketing Company, over the fact that an ever increasing number of stores are selling a quart of milk over the counter to their customers for 10 cents, which bottle milk is purchased from the Marketing Company. All sorts of misrepresentation about this 10-cent milk has been spread broadcast. The poison squad has recently worked overtime on it. Possibly because the dealers have just recently woke up to the fact that in spite of the most tremendous opposition, the central plant of the Marketing Company is steadily increasing its business in Chicago.

The amusing fact is that it is now many months ago since the first store began to sell Marketing Company milk for 10 cents a quart. For months the poison squad either did not know about it or paid no attention to it. Recently the dealers have begun to take notice, and immediately the poison squad gets busy. Why?

For the benefit of our farmer readers, here are the actual facts:

Guarantee Against Bottle Loss. The stores that buy this milk from the Marketing Company pay 9 cents a quart for it, and return to the company every empty bottle or pay 5 cents per bottle for any bottle not returned, thereby guaranteeing the Marketing Company against any bottle loss.

During the time that this bottle milk business has been in progress, the Chicago dealers have paid the farmer about 4 cents per quart for milk in the country. This leaves a difference of 5 cents between the cost of the milk in the country and the price the Marketing Company has sold the milk for. For this 5 cents a quart the Marketing Company has had to pay the freight, pasteurize, bottle and deliver the milk through its central plant to the stores.

Any school boy with a lead pencil, who will do a little figuring, can quickly arrive at the conclusion that it is just a question of volume, or the amount of business that could be done, as to whether this company would in the end enable the Marketing Company to pay the full price for milk to the farmer that the other dealers were paying and come out even.

Business Has Steadily Grown. The Marketing Company, on the refusal of the dealers to do business with it, took that chance, and is pleased to report the volume has steadily grown, and with its present rate of increase, the time is not far

ONLY FEW VOTES CAST ON TUESDAY

Due to the near zero weather all day Tuesday the vote on the new constitution was very light, only 250 votes being cast. Of these 100 were cast at the east side precinct, of which 58 voted for the new project while 42 voiced their opinion against it. Over on the west side the voters seemed to be satisfied with the old government code for 92 voted against the new constitution and 58 voted for it, making a total of 116 for and 134 against.

Early indication over the state showed that the vote against the constitution would be at least 3 to 1 with a probability of 5 to 1 against the constitution.

Marketing Company Wins Important Point for the Organization

IS MAKING PROGRESS

Wonderful Stock Raising Country

Vast stretches of undeveloped fertile agricultural land of the highest productivity await the settler in Western Canada. The land possesses the same character of soil as that which has produced the high quality of cereals that have carried off the world's premier honors so many times in the past ten years.

Native Grasses are Rich and Abundant

Cattle fatten upon them without any grain being fed. Limited capital on high-priced lands is not a success, neither can the tenant burdened with high rents hope to succeed. The place to overcome these is in Western Canada—where land is cheap where a home may be made at low cost, and where dairying, mixed farming and stock-raising give an assured profit.

Land may be purchased from the Railway Companies or from responsible land companies or from private owners. Free homestead of 160 acres each are to be had in the more remote districts.

HARDING'S MESSAGE TAKES FIRM STAND FOR PROHIBITION

MANY OTHER PROBLEMS ARE MENTIONED BY PRESIDENT.

AGRICULTURAL RELIEF IS GIVEN FOREMOST PLACE

Hits at Strikes Which He Says Threaten the Welfare of the People and Menace Public Safety—To Call Conference of Governors on the Prohibition Issue.

Washington, Dec. 8.—President Harding appeared before congress with his annual message on the state of the Union. The following is a partial text of what he said:

"There never again will be precisely the old order; indeed, I know of no one who thinks it to be desirable. For out of the old order came the war itself, and the new order, established and made secure, never will permit its recurrence.

"It is no figure of speech to say we have come to the test of our civilization. The world has been passing—is today passing—through a great crisis. The conduct of war itself is not more difficult than the solution of the problems which necessarily follow.

Considers Home Problems.

"I am not speaking at this moment of the problem in its wider aspects of world rehabilitation or of international relationships. The reference is to our own social, financial and economic problems at home. These things are not to be considered solely as problems apart from all international relationship, but every nation must be able to carry on for itself, else its international relationship will have scant importance.

"Doubtless our own people have emerged from the World War tumult less impaired than most belligerent powers; probably we have made larger progress toward reconstruction. . . . Had we escaped the coal and railway strikes, which had to excuse for their beginning, and less justification for their delayed settlement, we should have done infinitely better. But labor was insistent on holding to the war heights, and heedless forces of reaction sought the prewar levels, and both were wrong.

"The railway strike accentuated the difficulty of the American farmer. The first distress of readjustment came to the farmer, and it will not be a readjustment fit to abide until he is relieved. The distress brought to the farmer does not affect him alone. Agricultural ill fortune is a national ill fortune.

Saved From Disaster.

This congress already has taken cognizance of the misfortune which precipitate deflation brought to American agriculture. Your measures of relief and the reduction of the federal reserve discount rate undoubtedly saved the country from widespread disaster. The very proof of helpfulness already given is the strongest argument for the permanent establishment of widened credits, heretofore temporarily extended through the war finance corporation.

"The farm loan bureau, which already has proved its usefulness through the federal land banks, may well have its powers enlarged to provide ample farm production credits as well as enlarged land credits.

"In the last half of the year now closing the railways, broken in carrying capacity because of motive power and rolling stock out of order, though insistently declaring to the contrary, embargoed the farmer's shipments, or denied him cars when fortunate markets were calling.

Rail Problem Vital.

"I know of no problem exceeding in importance this one of transportation. . . . We have built 40 per cent of the world's railroad mileage, and yet find it inadequate to our present requirements. When we contemplate the inadequacy of today, it is easy to believe that the next few decades will witness the paralysis of our transportation-using social scheme or a complete reorganization on some new basis.

"Manifestly, we have need to begin on plans to co-ordinate all transportation facilities. We should more effectively connect up our rail lines with our carriers by sea. We ought to reap some benefit from the hundreds of millions expended on inland waterways, providing our capacity to utilize as well as expend. We ought to turn the motortruck into a railway feeder and distributor instead of a destroying competitor.

"This transportation problem cannot be waved aside. The demand for lowered costs on farm products and basic materials cannot be ignored. Rates horizontally increased to meet increased wage outlays during the war inflation are not easily reduced. When Dry Yuletide for New York.

New York.—In preparation for the most drastic enforcement of the state prohibition law in white light cabarets, restaurants and dance halls around the holiday season, order to "dry up Broadway" were received by commanders of the two tendorin police stations, with instructions that every patrolman would be held accountable for hip-pocket violations as well.

Federal authorities also have planned an active campaign in co-operation with the police, it was said.

Business Conference at Chicago.

Washington.—Another of the bureau of educational regional conferences on the co-ordination of business and education will be held December 20 at Chicago. It is announced, with representative middle western business men and teachers of business subjects in attendance. The speakers include M. E. Hotchkiss, director of the National Industrial Clothing Manufacturers of Chicago, and G. F. Gephart of the First National bank of St. Louis, with others of prominence.

some very moderate wage reductions were effected last summer there was a 5 per cent horizontal reduction in rates. I sought at that time, in a very informal way, to have the railway managers to go before the interstate commerce commission and agree to a heavier reduction on farm products and coal and other basic commodities and leave unchanged the freight tariffs which a very large portion of the traffic was able to bear. Neither the managers nor the commission saw fit to adopt the suggestion. Railways are not expected to render the most essential service in our social organization without a fair return on capital invested, but the government has gone so far in the regulation of rates and rules of operation that it has the responsibility of pointing the way to the reduced freight costs so essential to your national welfare. Government operation does not afford the cure.

"The labor board itself is not so constituted as best to serve the public interest. With six partisan members on a board of nine, three partisans nominated by the employees and three by the railway managers, it is inevitable that the partisan viewpoint is maintained throughout hearings and in decisions handed down. . . . I am well convinced that the functions of this tribunal could be much better carried on here in Washington.

Offers New Plan.

"The substitution of a labor division in the interstate commerce commission made up from its membership to hear and decide disputes relating to wages and working conditions which have failed of adjustment by proper committees created by the railways and their employees, offers a more effective plan.

"This suggested substitution will involve a necessary increase in the membership of the commission, probably four, to constitute the labor division. If the suggestion appeals to the congress, it will be well to specify that the labor division shall be constituted of representatives of the four rate-making territories, thereby assuring a tribunal conversant with the conditions which obtain in the different rate-making sections of the country.

Most Demoralizing Factor.

"Constitutional prohibition has been adopted by the nation. It is the supreme law of the land. In plain speaking, there are conditions relating to its enforcement which savor of nation-wide scandal. It is the most demoralizing factor in our public life. . . . Most of our people assumed that the adoption of the eighteenth amendment meant the elimination of the question from our politics. On the contrary, it has been so intensified as an issue that many voters are disposed to make all political decisions with reference to this single question. It is distracting the public mind and prejudicing the judgment of the electorate.

"The day is unlikely to come when the eighteenth amendment will be repealed. The fact may as well be recognized and our course adapted accordingly. If the statutory provisions for its enforcement are contrary to deliberate public opinion, which I do not believe, the rigorous and literal enforcement will concentrate public attention on any requisite modification.

"Such a course conforms with the law and saves the humiliation of the government and the humiliation of our people before the world, and challenges the destructive forces engaged in widespread violation, official corruption, and individual demoralization.

Plans Governors' Meet.

"The eighteenth amendment involves the concurrent authority of state and federal governments for the enforcement of the policy it defines. A certain lack of definiteness, through division of responsibility is thus introduced. In order to bring about a full understanding of duties and responsibilities, as thus distributed, I purpose to invite the governors of the states and territories, at an early opportunity, to a conference with the federal executive authority. Out of the full and free considerations which will thus be possible, it is confidently believed will emerge a more adequate comprehension of the whole problem, and definite policies of national and state co-operation in administering the laws.

"There are pending bills for the registration of the alien who has come to our shores. I wish the passage of such an act might be expedited. . . . Before enlarging the immigration quota, we had better provide registration for aliens, now here or continually pressing for admission, and establish our examination boards abroad, to make sure of desirable only.

Wants to Be Prepared.

"The proposed survey of a plan to draft all the resources of the republic, human and material, for national defense may well have your approval. I commended such a program in case of future war. In the inaugural address of March 4, 1921, and every experience in the adjustment and liquidation of the war claims and the settlement of war obligations persuades me we ought to be prepared for such universal call to armed defense."

Rural Doctors Serve Most Patients.

The average country doctor in Ohio serves twice as many patients as does his city colleague, an investigation by the Ohio State university has revealed. It is stated that in the remote country districts there are plenty of country doctors to take care of patients, but that, in the regions near a larger city the physician often forgoes his rural practice for the broader opportunities of the city. In the 15 Ohio counties that have the largest urban population, every rural doctor now has to take care of an average of 1,512 persons. In the 15 counties of the state which are most thoroughly rural there is one physician for every 887 persons.

Grass Lake School

MARIE ROTHERS, Editor

Ice skating is very good on the lakes. Fourteen children were skating on Bluff lake Sunday.

Louis Forbrich says the ice is about 3 to 4 inches thick.

Peter Waldweiler was quite unlucky Sunday. While skating, the ice broke and he went in up to his hips. He suffered no injury.

Fourteen children of this school surprised Peter Waldweiler Saturday evening at 7:30. They played bunco and Clara Michell received the girls' first prize. James Klein received the boys' first prize. Marie Rother and Lester Trieger won the booby prizes.

Refreshments were served and game were played. At 11 o'clock everyone went home saying they had a good time. James Klein of Chicago was at the party.

The children drew names today (Monday) to see to whom they should give presents.

Mrs. Stanton is helping some of the children to paint water color pictures for Xmas presents.

We are not going to have a regular Christmas entertainment this year, but Mrs. C. E. Herman has given us a tree which we will decorate and presents will be distributed to the children.

Mrs. H. Michell went to Chicago with her daughter Josephine Sunday night.

Mrs. B. Rother and her daughter Louise left here to visit in Chicago for a few days.

Our School Betterment society elected new officers: Miss Mary Michell president, Clara Michell secretary, and monitors, Kathryn Anzinger, Peter Kiefer and Marie Rother.

We finished our exams last week and are happy to say that few failures were made.

MICKIE SAYS

ONE THING ABOUT THE SMALL NEWSPAPER THESE DAYS IS THAT ITS CLEAN AND CAN BE READ BY EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY, WHILE THE CITY PAPERS ARE FILLED WITH CRIME AND SCANDAL! THEY GURE ANY FIT PER US KIDS TO READ!

NEW VARIETY TAKING PLACE OF DISEASE-AFFECTED CANE

Five years ago the sugar plantations of Porto Rico were threatened with disaster because of the sudden appearance and the rapid spread of a serious disease known as yellow stripe, or mosaic disease, and the planters appealed to the United States department of agriculture for help.

Investigators sent to the island by the bureau of plant industry to cooperate with the insular and federal experiment stations there soon discovered that a variety of cane known as Kavangire then being grown only in experimental plants, seemed to be immune to the disease, which was attacking practically every other variety grown in Porto Rico.

Kavangire cane is grown commercially in the Argentine, and through the efforts of cooperation of the director of the Tucuman agricultural experiment station the department made arrangements for an immediate shipment of 5 tons of seed cane of that variety to Porto Rico. The cane was packed in charcoal in barrels and shipped about the middle of July, 1919, arriving on the island early in September. This is probably the longest haul of seed cane in large quantity ever made.

The immune cane was grown by the federal and insular experiment stations for the purpose of increasing the quantity of seed cane. Later this was distributed to each of the central stations on the island, and a recent report shows that it has been giving very good results. One of the stations had 500 acres of Kavangire this year and is planning to increase to 1,000 acres next year. Another has 200 acres in one valley and considerable plantings in other districts. About half of the cane acreage in this locality is now out of cane because of the mosaic disease and only the new variety will be planted hereafter.

distant when the Marketing Company will not only be able to pay the farmer in the country the same price that the other dealers are paying, but unquestionably is going to develop the business to a point that the Marketing Company will be able to pay more money for the milk that it buys than the dealers are paying.

Suppose, for instance, that this business should grow to a point that the Marketing Company was doing even 5 percent of the bottle milk business of the city by this method. In round figures, about 1,000,000 quarts of milk per day in Chicago are supposed to be sold in bottles. Suppose the Marketing Company is able to develop this to a point that 5 percent of the business is handled by the Marketing Company in this way, or 50,000 quarts a day, at 5 cents a quart for handling it. This would give the Marketing Company $2,500 a day to pay the freight, bottle and deliver this milk. These figures speak for themselves and unquestionably mean that the further development of this store business means not only more milk used in the city but a better price to the farmer.

Dealers Fear Company.

When this business first started, the dealers paid little attention to it, but as it has steadily grown the dealers suddenly awakened to the danger of it and let out a piercing squawk, for all too plainly they realized that before many moons the bottle milk business of the Marketing Company, if it keeps up its present rate of growth, is surely going to place the company in a position to be a dangerous factor in this market; that the Company will not only be able to pay the full price that the dealers are paying but unquestionably a better price. Ah! there's the rub. Every good thing has to have its start, every successful enterprise has to go through the trying period of making a start. Consequently, in the start off of this business, as long as the dealers knew that the overhead plant expense of handling and delivering a small volume prevented the company from being able to pay as much for milk as the dealers were paying, they, the dealers, rested happy.

Poison Squad in Action.

However, the constant growth of this business is giving the dealers some uneasy moments, feeling that they have already let it go too far, and failing to kill it at this end, they are now trying other tactics. Consequently, the dealers squawk and the poison squad welded into action on the double quick. Why?

Dear reader, this is all there is to this great hubbub and noise about 10-cent milk. Nothing so very bad about it after all, is there?

Along with the squawk about 10-cent milk goes those other dismal tales about the price slashing, etc., that the Marketing Company is doing in the price of wholesale milk in Chicago to the restaurants, hotels, etc., this latter story is just as much of a fake, just as has been all this hush about 10-cent milk.

The story of what the Marketing Company has done in securing steady wholesale business in the loop dis strict, against almost unbelievable opposition, is a long one. At a later date a story will be written, giving the full and complete history of how the Marketing Company was first forced into wholesale milk business, and has remained to make a success of it, why the dealers fear it, and what it means to the milk producers.

In the meantime, do not believe the absurd falsehoods of the poison squad. They are absolutely without foundation.

"My son spoke words of truth," he proclaimed sonorously. "He warned us against the king over the waters and told us to make friends with the Americans. We did not heed his words, and so he brought the great chief of the Long Knives, who stood without fear among warriors more numerous than leaves and spoke the same words to all. We are friends of the Long Knives. My son is the true prophet. Bring out the false one and Crooked Lightning and Black Wolf, whose life my son saved though the two were enemies. My son shall do with them as he pleases."

Many young braves sprang willingly forward and the three were hailed before Erskine. Old Kah-too waved his hand toward them and sat down. Erskine rose and fixed his eyes sternly on the cowering prophet.

"He shall go forth from the village and shall never return. For his words work mischief, he does foolish things, and his drumming frightens the game. He is a false prophet and he must go." He turned to Crooked Lightning:

"The Indians have made peace with the Long Knives and White Arrow would make peace with any Indian, though an enemy. Crooked Lightning shall go or stay, as he pleases. Black Wolf shall stay, for the tribe will need him as a hunter and a warrior against the English foes of the Long Knives. White Arrow does not ask another to spare an enemy's life and then take it away himself."

The braves grunted approval. Black Wolf and Crooked Lightning averted their faces and the prophet shuffled uneasily away. Again old Kah-too proclaimed sonorously, "It is well!" and went back with Erskine to his tent. There he sank wearily on a buffalo-skin and pleaded with the boy to stay with them as chief in his stead. He was very old, and now that peace was made with the Long Knives he was willing to die. If Erskine would but give his promise, he would never rise again from where he lay.

Erskine shook his head and the old man sorrowfully turned his face. And yet Erskine lingered on and on at the village. Of the white woman he had learned little other than that she had been bought from another tribe and adopted by old Kah-too; but it was plain that since the threatened burning of her she had been held in high respect by the whole tribe. He began to wonder about her and whether she might not wish to go back to her own people. He had never talked with her, but he never moved about the camp that he did not feel her eyes upon him. And Early Morn's big soft eyes, too, never seemed to leave him. She brought him food, she sat at the door of his tent, she followed him about the village and bore herself openly as his slave. At last old Kah-too, who would not give up his great hope, pleaded with him to marry her, and while he was talking the girl stood at the door of the tent and interrupted them. Her mother's eyes were growing dim, she said. Her mother wanted to talk with White Arrow and look upon his face before her sight should altogether pass. Nor could Erskine know that the white woman wanted to look into the eyes of the man she hoped would become her daughter's husband, but Kah-too did, and he bade Erskine go. His foster mother, coming upon the scene, scolded, but Erskine rose and went to the white woman's tent. She sat just inside the opening, with a blanket across the lower half of her face, nor did she look at him. Instead she pined him with questions, and listened eagerly to his every word, and drew from him every detail of his life as far back as he could remember. Poor soul, it was the first opportunity for many years that she had had to talk with any white person who had been in the eastern world, and freely and frankly he held nothing back.

All the while the girl had crouched near, looking at Erskine with doglike eyes, and when he rose to go the woman dropped the blanket from her face and got to her feet. Shyly she lifted her hands, took his face between them, bent close, and studied it searchingly.

"What is your name?" "Erskine Dale." Without a word she turned back into her tent.

At dusk Erskine stood by the river's brim, with his eyes lifted to a rising moon and his thoughts with Barbara on the bank of the James. Behind him he heard a rustle and, turning, he saw the girl, her breast throbbing and her eyes burning with a light he had never seen before.

"Black Wolf will kill you," she whispered. "Black Wolf wants Early Morn and he knows that Early Morn wants White Arrow." Erskine put both hands on her shoulders and looked down into her eyes. She trembled, and when his arms went about her she surged closer to him and the touch of her warm, supple body went through him like fire. And then with a triumphant smile she sprang back.

"Black Wolf will see," she whispered, and fled. Erskine sank to the ground, with his head in his hands. The girl ran back to her tent, and the mother, peering at the flushed face and shining eyes, cove to the trust. She said nothing, but when the girl was asleep and faintly smiling, the white woman sat staring out into the moonlit woods, softly beating her breast.

CHAPTER XIV

Erskine had given Black Wolf his life, and the young brave had accepted the debt and fretted under it sorely. And when Erskine had begun to show some heed to Early Morn's fierce jealousy, seized the savage, and his old hatred was reborn a thousandfold more strong—and that, too, Erskine now knew. Meat ran low and a hunting party went abroad. Game was scarce and only after the second day was there a kill. Erskine had sighted a huge buck, had fired quickly and at close range. Wounded, the buck had charged. Erskine's knife was twisted in his belt, and the buck was upon him before he could get it out. He tried to dart for a tree, stumbled, turned, and caught the infuriated beast by the horns. He uttered no cry, but the angry bellow of the stag reached the ears of Black Wolf through the woods, and he darted toward the sound. And he came none too soon. Erskine heard the crack of a rifle, the stag toppled over, and he saw Black Wolf standing over him with a curiously triumphant look on his saturnine face. In Erskine, when he rose, the white man was predominant, and he thrust out his hand, but Black Wolf ignored it.

"White Arrow gave Black Wolf his life. The debt is paid."

Erskine looked at his enemy, nodded, and the two bore the stag away. Instantly a marked change was plain in Black Wolf. He told the story of the fight with the buck to all. Boldly he threw off the mantle of shame, stalked haughtily through the village and went back to open enmity with Erskine. At dusk a day or two later, when he was coming down the path from the white woman's wigwam, Black Wolf confronted him, scowling.

"Early Morn shall belong to Black Wolf," he said insolently. Erskine met his baleful, half-drunken eyes scornfully.

"We will leave that to Early Morn," he said coolly, and then thundered suddenly:

"Out of my way!"

Black Wolf hesitated and gave way, but ever thereafter Erskine was on guard.

In the white woman, too, Erskine now saw a change. Once she had encouraged him to stay with the Indians; now she lost no opportunity to urge against it. She had heard that Hamilton would try to rescue Vincennes, that he was forming a great force with which to march south, sweep through Kentucky, batter down the wooden forts, and force the Kentuckians behind the great mountain wall. Erskine would be needed by the whites, who would never understand or trust him if he should stay with the Indians. All this she spoke one day when Erskine came to her tent to talk. Her face had blanched, she had argued passionately that he must go, and Erskine was sorely puzzled. The girl, too, had grown rebellious and disobedient, for the change in her mother was plain also to her, and she could not understand. Moreover Erskine's stubbornness grew, and he began to flame within at the stalling insolence of Black Wolf, who slipped through the shadows of day and the dusk to spy on the two whenever they came together. And one day when the sun was midway, and in the open of the village, the clash came. Black Wolf darted forth from his wigwam, his eyes bloodshot with rage and drink, and his hunting knife in his hand. A cry from Early Morn warned Erskine and he wheeled. At Black Wolf made a vicious slash at him he sprang aside, and with his fist caught the savage in the jaw. Black Wolf fell heavily and Erskine was upon him with his own knife at his enemy's throat.

"Stop them!" old Kah-too cried sternly, but it was the terrified shriek of the white woman that stayed Erskine's hand. Two young braves disarmed the fallen Indian, and Kah-too looked indignantly at his adopted son.

"Turn him loose," Erskine scorned. "I have no fear of him. He is a woman and drunk, but next time I shall kill him."

The white woman had run down, caught Early Morn, and was leading her back to her tent. From inside presently came low, passionate pleading from the woman and an occasional sob from the girl. And when an hour later, at dusk, Erskine turned upward toward the tent, the girl gave a horrified cry, flashed from the tent, and darted for the high cliff over the river.

"Catch her!" cried the mother. "Quick!" Erskine fled after her, overtook her with her hands upraised for the plunge on the very edge of the cliff, and half carried her, struggling and sobbing, back to the tent. Within the girl dropped in a weeping heap, and with her face covered, and the woman turned to Erskine, agonized.

"I'll tell her," she whispered, "and she was going to kill herself. You are my son!"

Still sleepless at dawn, the boy rode firely into the woods. At sunset he came in, gaunt with brooding and hunger. His foster mother brought him food, but he would not touch it. The Indian woman stared at him with keen suspicion, and presently old Kah-too, passing slowly, bent on him the same look, but asked no question. Erskine gave no heed to either, but his mother, watching from her wigwam, understood and grew fearful. Quickly she stepped outside and called him, and he rose and went to her bewildered; she was smiling.

"They are watching," she said, and Erskine, too, understood, and kept his back toward the watchers.

"I have decided," he said. "You and she must leave here and go with me."

His mother pretended much displeasure. "She will not leave, and I will not leave her"—her lips trembled—"and I would have gone long ago but—"

"I understand," interrupted Erskine, "but you will go now with your son." The poor woman had to scowl. "No, and you must not tell them. They will never let me go, and they will use me to keep you here. You must go as long as you are here, and if you stay she will die, or kill herself. Some day—"

She turned abruptly and went back into her tent. Erskine wheeled and went to old Kah-too.

"You want Early Morn?" asked the old man. "You shall have her." "No," said the boy, "I am going back to the big chief."

"You are my son and I am old and weak." "I am a soldier and must obey the big chief's commands, as must you."

"I shall live," said the old man wearily, "until you come again."

Erskine nodded and went for his horse. Black Wolf watched him with malignant satisfaction, but said nothing—nor did Crooked Lightning. Erskine turned once as he rode away. His mother was standing outside her wigwam. Mournfully she waved her hand. Behind her and within the tent he could see Early Morn with both hands at her breast.

CHAPTER XV

Dawned 1781. The war was coming into Virginia at last. Virginia falling would thrust a great wedge through the center of the confederacy, feed the British armies and end the fight. Cornwallis was to drive the wedge, and never had the opening seemed easier. Virginia was drained of its fighting men, and south of the mountains was protected only by a militia, for the most part, of old men and boys. North and south ran despair. The soldiers had no pay, little food, and only old worn-out coats, tattered linen overalls and one blanket between three men, to protect them from drifting snow and icy wind. Even the great Washington was near despair, and in foreign help his sole hope lay. Already the traitor, Arnold, had taken Richmond, burned warehouses, and returned, but little harassed, to Portsmouth.

Cornwallis was coming on. Tarleton's white rangers were bedeviling the land, and it was at this time that Erskine Dale once more rode firely to the river James.

"Twenty-nine steps from the high-rent district."

This identical slogan is well known to readers of the display advertisements in the papers published in a certain large city in this country. In substance it is well known to the readers of the advertisements in any large city, because the closer a store is to the center of congestion in that city the greater is its overhead.

Taken inversely, it is also true that as the site is at some distance from that center, the lower is its overhead, other things being equal.

The rule works out with such exactness that the rise or fall in this overhead can be calculated with every pace of that distance, as the advertiser mentioned in the foregoing has demonstrated.

Where many persons are crowded together, the cost of living is forced up as a result. The greater the congestion, the higher the cost. To relieve this congestion and make it possible for the man with a moderate income to live in comfort and to provide for his family adequately, there is a centrifugal movement in every large city from the downtown section to the suburbs. On a larger scale, but for the same end, there is the movement from city to country—"back to the farm," or to the small town.

Damage Is Averted.

The balance is restored by the time the movement has continued for some time from the big city to, say Antioch. It is like a lightning rod that draws from the clouds the charge of high voltage and so keeps the storm clouds from storing up a force that might hurl a bolt earthward and wreak great destruction.

It costs a huge sum to run a store on a desirable downtown corner in a large city, and the cost for the extra charge is assessed upon every person buying goods there. The site on which the famous Flatiron building in New York is located is a good example of this. Everybody wants that corner, and the competition for its possession has raised the price to a fabulous sum. In the same way many a store site in a big city is inflated in price until it is assessed several times its real value, but taxes must be paid on it, inflated value and all. Every dollar's worth of goods sold must pay tribute toward these taxes.

And you—people of Antioch—are helping to pay this tribute every time you buy at such a store.

But higher taxes aren't all that your money is wasted for. There is the higher rent. The owner of the property, who is assessed this high tax, has more money invested than the man in the next block further uptown, and he wants his interest back on that investment. He screws up the rent in a direct ratio.

Thickly Built District.

The district is thickly built up. Story upon story are added to each building until they constitute a wilderness of skyscrapers. The fire hazard increases with every floor. Insurance rates soar with the high cost of everything else.

Other items of this sort might be added almost indefinitely, for all of which Antioch shoppers must help to pay when they take their patronage from Antioch merchants—where it belongs—and carry it to the distant city.

All the stores in the city are not like the one described in the foregoing. Some are like the stores in Antioch, where honest prices are charged, where you get 100 percent in value and in service for every cent you spend there. But you don't go to those stores when you go on a shopping expedition to the city, because they are in the outlying sections, where conditions are more like those in your home town.

WHOSE RENT DO YOU PAY?

Are you helping to pay the rent of the big city stores? Are you contributing to the taxes, insurance, interest, employees' wages, and the hundreds of other expenses of the department stores or mail-order houses? Most surely you are if you are buying anything from them. Every dollar's worth of goods sold by such business houses must help pay these expenses. These costs are enormous and must be paid—and if you buy, you pay. Isn't it better economy to buy from the merchants of your own town?
